

To Weld and Larimer County Commissioners and State of Colorado
Representatives and officials:

My Company (Company Name) is concerned about proposals to mine uranium in northern Colorado for these reasons:

- The negative health impacts of exposure to radiation are well- known, and radiation is released into the environment by all forms of uranium mining.
- According to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's 2007 report, in-situ leach mining has a history of contaminating water.
- Uranium mining in our area could expose human, horse and livestock populations to health threats from contaminated groundwater, airborne radioactive particles, retention dam breaks, and transportation accidents.

Therefore, we urge our representatives and public officials to protect Colorado's citizens, our outdoor sporting industries, and equine, farm and ranch populations by:

- Not providing permits to allow uranium mining until questions and concerns about safety, health, and water quality are answered by those who propose to mine.
- Developing regulations to protect your constituents from the use of in-situ leach technology to mine uranium in Colorado.
- Promoting economic development that provides for local people and meets local needs while protecting the public's health and safety as well as our outdoor and agricultural lifestyles.
